Hi, Yoko!

I enjoyed playing tennis with you after school today. Thank you for coming to my house after the game. My mother was happy to finally meet you. Guess what? I found your jacket after you went home! It was in the living room. I can bring it next week when we meet at school. Do you need it before then?

See you soon.

Ami

Hi, Ami!

Thanks so much for your e-mail. When I got home, I didn't have my jacket. I thought I left it at school. I was going to go back there to look for it, but luckily I checked my e-mail first. My mom gets very angry when I forget things. Last month, I couldn't find my cellphone. My grandmother found it in her bedroom. I need to be more careful. Actually, I'll need my jacket before next week. My mom wants to go shopping with me on Sunday morning, so can I get my jacket from you before then? Would you like to go and see a movie on Friday afternoon? My mom says you can come here for dinner on Friday night, too. If you aren't free on Friday, I can stop at your house to pick up the jacket on Thursday or Saturday.

Thanks!

Yoko

Who Kidnapped the Baby?

One day Michal was hired as a baby-sitter for the Johnsons' two-year baby boy, Teddy. The Johnsons live in a large house, and Michal did not know the house very well. This was his first time to baby-sit.

After Mr. and Mrs. Johnson had gone out to attend a party, Michal played with Teddy for a while. Then he tried to send him to bed. But as Teddy didn't want to go to bed, it wasn't easy to send him to bed. Finally, however, Teddy became sleepy and went upstairs to bed. Then Michal turned on the audio player and began to do his homework.

When he had finished his homework, he turned off the player, and turned on the television. Mrs. Johnson had left some snacks for him, so Michal enjoyed them and watched television for a while.

Suddenly he thought, "It's very quiet upstairs. Indeed, it's too quiet. I'll go and see."

He went upstairs to look. He went into the room. It was too dark to see well, but the bed looked empty. He turned on the light. The bed was empty! Where was the baby? "He may be playing a trick on me. He may be hiding under the bed," he thought. He looked under the bed. Not there. The windows were open and the curtains were flying in the wind. "Has he fallen out of the window?" He looked out of the window. Not there. "Someone has *kidnapped him!!!" he thought. "What shall I do? What will his parents say? This is terrible! I must call the police."

He ran downstairs to call the police. Just when he reached the telephone, the doorbell rang. He ran to the door. "Who is it?" he asked in a loud voice. "We are back."

It was the baby's parents. Michal felt *relieved and at the same time afraid. "What shall I say to them? Their baby was kidnapped?" He opened the door.

"How's everything? You look pale. It's hard to baby-sit for the first time. You are tired, aren't you?" said Mrs. Johnson, and she hurried upstairs.

“Is Ted sleeping quietly?” said Mrs. Johnson, but Michal was too *frightened to say anything. He just followed her without saying anything. She went past the room that Michal had entered, and went into the next room. She turned on the light, looked in, and said, “Ah! He’s sleeping like an angel.”

Michal had looked into the wrong room! He felt a little foolish, --- but at the same time, how relieved he felt!
